PEPPERS

Tastes and distinctive aromas are the natural, desired features of our most popular spices. They have a wide range of culinary uses and add endless character to every dish. It is also worth knowing that various kinds of pepper seeds are all actually from the same type of plant, but collected at different stages of the plant's development. Thus, naturally helping us along with bringing out the important, desired zest.

SINGLE SPICES AND HERBS

It is not possible to imagine Polish cuisine without marjoram or Greek cuisine without oregano. Herb seasonings form the base for European dishes. They are key, aromatic ingredients for soups, salads and meat, fish or vegetable meals. They allow not only the emphasis of natural flavour but also help with beneficial processes in the digestive system. Their power derives completely from nature, which guarantees the natural full flavour and aroma every time.

PAPRIKAS

Paprika or ground pepper is one of the most popular and frequently used spices. It has been used and appreciated for both its culinary use and its natural properties since as far back as 2500 B.C. Today It is hard to imagine Spanish, Mexican, Indian or Hungarian cuisine without paprika. It is also widely present in Polish cuisine, adding flavour and radiant colour to many traditional dishes.

BREADCRUMBS

AND FRIED ONION

Breadcrumbs are a simple, yet indispensable ingredient in the art of cooking. Used for breading (also known as crumbing) various types of fried meats and vegetables. Adhered to such with the aid of plain flour and egg, produces a perfectly crisp, golden finish. Prymat fried onion makes an aromatic and tasty addition to many dishes. With unlimited uses in the kitchen, it is suitable for both meat and vegetables. It wonderfully underlines the flavours of fish, potatoes, hamburgers, pizzas, hot dogs and hot or cold sandwiches and salads. In Poland it is often used to coat dumplings and noodles. Ideally fried, crispy with a golden colour, it tastes just exceptional.
